The Result.

The full official returns from Pennsylvania give Grant 340,680 votes, and Horace Greeley 211,961 votes. Grant's majority is, therefore, 137,738. In October the Democrats polled 317,760 votes, and the Republicans polled 353,387 votes. Thus, 105,799 Democrats stayed away from the polls, refusing to support a man they despised, and 3,698 Republicans refused to vote for Gen. Grant, and yet his friends call this an overwhelming popular endorsement of Grant's administration.

As it was in Pennsylvania, so it was throughout the entire country. The same spirit of apathy was everywhere manifested, and to this indifference on the part of the Democrats was mainly owing the success of the Republicans. This but confirms the opinion entertained by hundreds of thousands of intelligent men of both political parties, that the endorsement of Greeley, at Baltimore, was contrary to sound policy, and subversive of all hopes and opportunities of reform. Perhaps this may serve as a useful lesson to the political "wire-pullers" for the future.

The Democrats have nothing to discourage them, and there is no just cause for the demolition of the old party and the formation of a new, as suggested by the recent Ohio convention. The Democratic party is far, very far from being fatally or even seriously injured. The great majority of the White voters of the country are enrolled among its numbers, and if the self-constituted leaders and those to whom have been entrusted the direction of the party's affairs will cast aside all absurd attempts to "beat their opponents with their own weapons," an attempt as useless as it is odious, and act and labour entirely on principle, totally abjuring all dishonest policy, the Democratic banner need never go down; but, though long and sorely tried, its cause will ultimately be triumphant. The principles which, two years ago, were promulgated by the Democratic party of Delaware must, and sooner or later will prevail. Two races, entirely antagonistic and wholly different, cannot long live harmoniously together under circumstances of a forced equality utterly repugnant to the natural inclinations and desires of both, and though men, in their recklessness to maintain the power of a political faction, have fastened a quasi, temporary equality of races upon the nation, it cannot last, but when the sober second thought shall have had time to exercise its influence, men will return to their reason, and the different races will assume the rightful positions designed them by the Great Creator, whose ways are just, and whose laws are immutable. It is no more impossible for "the leopard to change his spots or the Ethiopian his skin," than it is for political demagogues and fanatics to establish an order of things which God and Nature alike forbade.

The Democratic Advocate published at Westminster, Md. under the auspices of our friends and whilom citizens, Wm. H. Vanderford and C. H. Vanderford, late of the Transcript, came to us on Saturday last in an entire new dress, and enlarged by the addition of another column. It is now a 36 column, and very handsome and excellent paper. We hail this marked evidence of the progress and prosperity of our friends with great pleasure. That they may continue to succeed, and their prosperity increase they have our most sincere wishes.

Moors, Dick and Fitzgerald, publishers, New York, have our thanks for a very interesting and entertaining little book, called "Howard's Recitations," a compilation of serious, pathetic and comic selections. "An Irishman's letter," on our first page, is a specimen of the comic, and "No rest in Heaven," on our fourth, of the serious characters of these publications.

We are also indebted to them for "How to live in society," a pleasing little book containing the prices at which they are sold.

Local and State Affairs.

Delaware City Items.

The ice house to be erected on the canal for Mr. Jacob Paul, of Philadelphia, will hold 3,000 tons of ice.

Died in this city, on Friday, the 15th inst. Miss Martha Hall, aged 71 years.

Thanksgiving will be observed in Christ Episcopal and the First Presbyterian churches. Rev. Dr. Thomas, Methodist, will preach in the Presbyterian church, the two congregations uniting on that day.

Colo. WEAVER.—On Tuesday morning last, the mercury stood at 22°.

Nearly all the mules of Brady Bros. used in towing on the canal (75 in number) have got the colic. On Saturday last one of the mules died. This malady, which has been prevailing for several days, has now fully developed itself. Quite a number of our farmers have sold out, and the damage to furniture will doubtless exceed that amount. All the winter clothing of the family was in the course of the fire, and was burned, as well as many other articles of value. The amount of insurance, we learn, is but three thousand dollars.—Elton Democrat, Nov. 16.

DOMESTIC COUNTRY.

WHEAT.—The wheat crop is looking very beautiful. The fine weather during seed time enabled farmers to do their work very excellently, and the regular appearance of the wheat crop, and the manner in which the land must be well in the next few days.

The epizootic influenza is reported to be spreading through our county.—Cambridge News.

LAND SALE.—R. Hynson, Esq. trustee, sold at the Voshell Sale, on Tuesday, the 22d of October, Mr. Franklin Dyre, known as "Colchester," containing 47 acres, to Captain Andrew Woodward, price $29,500. The Swain Point estate was withdrawn at a bid of $15,000.—Elton News.

THE HOUSE DISEASE.—After two weeks of the horse malady, and for a great portion of that time a general derangement of business affairs, the disease has so far abated that on and after the 1st of November, the horses will be in much better condition. The City Passengers' rail will way will to-day run the usual number of cars, on all the routes, and the usual number of trips, the want of which has been so felt since the disease appeared. Of the eight hundred horses belonging to the City Passenger Railway Company, but five have died, and they were all broken down. Very few valuable horses have been lost, and generally, when such die, it was because of working them before the disease had reached its turning-point.—Baltimore Gazette, of Monday.

Tournaments seem to be on the rage. To-day, (Saturday,) the boys will have a foot tournament. It will be held on South second street. There will be fourteen knights contest for the honors.

Funds sold at the last meeting of Kirkwood Building and Loan Association for 10d and 1s.

PATENT ACCIDENT.

A sad and fatal accident occurred at Canterbury, on the Delaware Railroad, Saturday afternoon, which resulted in the death of George W. Hall, a brakeman on freight train No. 9, due at Wilmington at 10 o'clock, A. M. The accident was caused by deceased attempting to pass one car to the other, on a long coupling pole, when the cars are loaded with logs, from which he fell. The train was moving at considerable speed at the time, and the injuries received by the deceased caused almost instant death. Both feet were cut off at the ankle, but the body still appeared to be in one piece, so he thought he would pass it through a course of treatment, as follows—he took a bag with some bran and tar in it, and poured hot water on it, then tied the bag to the animal's head so that it would give him a good steaming in the course of a few minutes our friend went to see how his patient was getting along; when to his surprise, he found that the horse had eaten the bran and tar up. We have not heard of the effect, but should judge he was either killed or cured.

The scourge is now raging in this neighborhood with fearful malignity. Nearly every horse in the village has been attacked, and there has been serious apprehension that in some cases it would terminate fatally; but we are happy to announce that so far none have died, although several remain in quite a critical condition.—Cambridge Prince.

Owing to Epizooty there were no horses to draw the fire-engines, hence the extent of the fire.

SCHOOL DATES.

No School in Heaven.

Taking of seats till late one eve,
The world deserts the angels believe,
That night I stood in a troubled dream,
By the side of a darkly flowing stream.

And a "Cherubman" down to the river came:
Then I heard a strange voice call his name.
"Good father, stop; when you cross this side,
You must leave your robes on the other side."

But the aged father did not mind,
And his long gown flouted out behind,
Down to the stream his way he took,
His pale hands clasping a gilt-edged book.

"I'm bound for heaven, and when I'm there,
I shall want my book of Common Prayer;
And though I put on a starry crown,
I should feel quite lost without my gown."

Then he fixed his eye on the shining track,
But his gown was heavy, and held him back,
And the poor old father tried in vain
A single step in the flood to gain.

Now him again on the other side,
But his silk gown had floated on the tide;
And no one could in that trifling spot,
Whether he belonged to "the Church" or not.

Then down to the river a Quaker strayed,
His dress of a sober hue was made;
"My coat and hat must be all of gray,
I cannot go any other way."

Then he buttoned his coat straight up to his chin,
And steadily, solemnly waded in,
And his broad brimmed hat he pulled down tight
Over his forehead, so cold and white.

But a strong wind carried away his hat;
A moment he silently sighed over that,
And then, as he gazed on the farther shore,
His coat slipped off, and was seen to save money.

He went into heaven, his suit of gray
Went quietly sailing away to gray;
And none of the angels questioned him
About the width of his leaver's brim.

Next came Dr. Watts with a bundle of Psalms
Tied nicely up, in his aged arms;
And he said, "I have a very wise thing,
That the people in heaven, 'all around,'

might sing."

But I thought he heaved an anxious sigh,
As he said that the river can broad and high,
And I was rather surprised, as, one by one,
The Psalms and Hymns in the waves went down.

And after him, with his MSS.,
Came Wesley, the pattern of godliness,
But he cried, "Dear me, what shall I do?
The water has soaked them through and through."

And then on the river, far and wide,
Away they went down the swollen tide,
And the saint, astonished, passed through alone;

Without his manuscripts, up to the throne.

Then gravely walking, two saints by name
Down to the stream together came,
But as they stopped at the river's brink
One said from the other shrunk.

"Splashed or plunged, may I ask you, friend,
How far attained to life's end?"

"Thus, with a few drops on my brow,"

"But I have been drenched, as you'll see me now;

And I really think it will hardly do,

As I'm 'tose commandment' to cross with you;

You're bound, I know, to the realms of bliss;

But you must go that way, and forget this."

Then straightway plunging with all his might,
Aye to his left, his friend at the right,
Aye to the west, this world of sin,
But at last together they entered in.

And now, when the river was rolling on,
A Presbyterian church went down;

Of women there was an innumerable throng,
But the men I could count as they passed along.

And concerning the road they could never agree,
The old or the new way, which it could be,
Nor ever a moment passed to think
That both would lead to the river's brink.

And a sound of murmuring long and loud
Came ever up from the moving crowd;

"You're in the old way, and I'm in the new,

That is the false, and this is the true;

Or, 'I'm in the old way, and you're in the new.'

That is the false, and this is the true."

But the brother only seemed to speak,
Modest the sisters walked, and meek;

And if ever one of them chanced to say

"What troubles she met with on the way,

How she longed to pass to the other side,

Or feared to cross over the swelling tide,

Or, "I'm in the old way, and you're in the new."

For have you not heard the words of Paul,

"Oh, let the women keep silence all?"

I watched them long in my curious dream,

The world stood to the borders of the stream,

Then, just as I thought the two ways met,

But all the brethren were talking yet,

And would talk on, till the heaving tide

Carried them over, side by side;

Side by side, for the way was one,

The toilsome journey of life was done,

And priest and Quaker, and all who died,

Are on the other side.

No friends, or crosses, or trials, and they,

No gossips of silk, or satin or grey,

No creeds to guide them, or Miss,

For all had put on Christ's righteousness.

Help Yourself.

Fight your own battles. Hoe your own row. Ask no favors of any one, and you'll succeed five thousand times better than one who is beseeching some one's patronage. "No one will be highly interested in your own affairs." The first step will not be such a long one, perhaps, but in carving your way up the mountain, you make each one lead to another and stand firm in that until you chop still another out. Men who have made fortunes are not those who had $5,000 given them to start with, but boys who have started fair with a well earned dollar or two. Men who have acquired have never been more popular by puff, begged or paid for, given in friendly spirit. They have outstretched their own hands and wounded the public heart. Men who win love do their own weeding, and I never knew to fail so signally as one who induced his affectionate grandmama to speak a word for him. Whether you work for love, for money, or anything else, work with your hand and heart and brain. Say "I will," and some day you will conquer. When you have it to say, "I have given up," Too many friends have been a man more than none at all—GOD BLESS YOU.

Wanted a strong young man
to go to the mines, such wages as $150 per month, and one who can work hard, and the day work, and the night work.
